

Every person, whether young or old, wealthy or poor, becomes pleased and happy when they receive a gift, as a gift is a testament of love and affection. Furthermore, if the gift is valuable, or the one presenting the gift is beloved, then one appreciates and values the gift even more. In the case where the gift is valuable AND the one presenting it is beloved, then the gift will be so cherished that one will hold onto it and value it until he dies.

On one occasion, Rasulullah (sallallahu ‘alaihi wasallam) – who is the most beloved person to every Ummati - addressed his beloved uncle, Sayyiduna ‘Abbaas (radhiyallahu ‘anhu), and said, “O my beloved uncle! Shall I not give you something (most valuable)? Shall I not bestow you (with a magnificent bounty)? Shall I not give you (a priceless gift)?”

Being offered a magnificent gift from the most beloved person of all, Rasulullah (sallallahu ‘alaihi wasallam), is such a privilege that every believer desires that he could have been the one to whom Rasulullah (sallallahu ‘alaihi wasallam) addressed those words. However, though the words were not addressed to us, we too can enjoy the magnificent gift that Rasulullah (sallallahu ‘alaihi wasallam) bestowed to his beloved uncle (radhiyallahu ‘anhu) – the gift of Salaatut Tasbeeh.

Rasulullah (sallallahu ‘alaihi wasallam) explained the immense virtue of this salaah to Sayyiduna ‘Abbaas (radhiyallahu ‘anhu) – that it causes all a person’s sins to be forgiven, from the first to the last, whether old or new, whether committed openly or in secret. In fact, such is the immense virtue of this salaah that Rasulullah (sallallahu ‘alaihi wasallam) encouraged Sayyiduna ‘Abbaas (radhiyallahu ‘anhu) to perform this salaah once a day. If he could not manage, then at least once a week, and if this is also difficult, then at least once a month. If even this is difficult, then at least once a year, and at the very least, one should perform it once in his lifetime so that he is not deprived of the immense rewards.

This salaah takes only twenty minutes to perform (on average), and can easily be performed
